by DAVID NICHOLLS
FICTION - 3RD JULY

Hodder & Stoughton £9.99

A walking holiday organised by a mutual friend bring together Michel and Marnie. An awkward friendship sparks through witty banter as they battle the elements, trying both to escape and face their broken pasts. A gently humorous novel, exploring loneliness, nature, and the quiet moments that can change the course of a life.

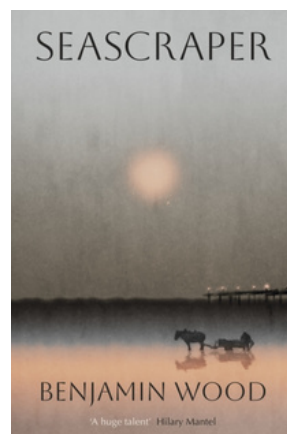

JUICE
by TIM WINTON
FICTION - 24TH JULY

Pan Macmillan £9.99

In a scorched, future Australia, a man and a girl search for shelter from both the brutal heat and darker, unnamed dangers. An abandoned mine reveals more than refuge—it sparks a reckoning with the man's past. Not quite the end of the world, this book asks what we become when the world starts to fail.

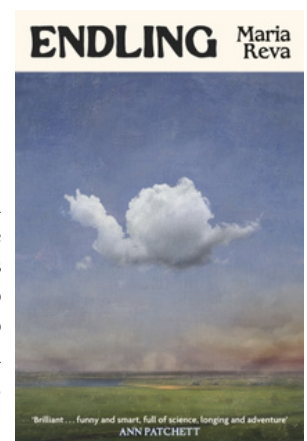

SEASCRAPER
by BENJAMIN WOOD
FICTION - 17TH JULY
Penguin £14.99

Thomas Flett's life is governed by the sea. He goes out twice a day to gather shrimp at low tide. It is lonely, dangerous work and he only just makes a living - so when a Hollywood director comes to town scoping out possible film locations, Thomas starts to dream of a different life for himself. Beautiful, timeless and atmospheric.

ENDLING
by MARIA REVA
FICTION - 3RD JULY
Little, Brown £20

Ukraine, 2022. Three women entangled in the romance tourism industry for various reasons hatch a daring plot to bring global media attention to the injustices they face. But when the Russian invasion begins, their plan goes awry.

CREATION LAKE by RACHEL KUSHNER

FICTION - 3RD JULY

Vintage £9.99

Sadie Smith is an American private spy sent to rural France to expose political violence among a sect of green activists. But as she plants herself in their coterie, she finds herself drawn ever closer to the worldview of their deity, a hermetic hippy determined to return civilisation to the age of Neanderthals.

GREAT EASTERN HOTEL by RUCHIR JOSHI

FICTION - 17TH JULY

HarperCollins £18.99

Calcutta, 1941. What do a history student and Communist party volunteer, the daughter of a Raj official, an aspiring artist, and a young pickpocket have in common? Their lives are about to intertwine around the luxurious Great Eastern Hotel... A panoramic story of India on the brink of independence.

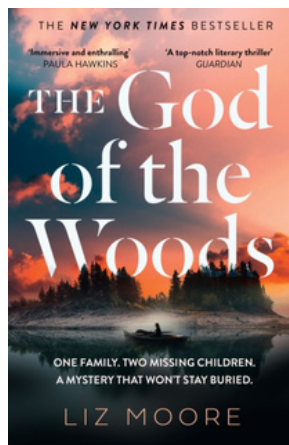

THE EYES ARE THE BEST PART by MONIKA KIM

FICTION - 3RD JULY

Octopus £10.99

When their mother moves her obnoxious new boyfriend into their already cramped apartment, Ji-Won and her sister are not happy. He's loud, domineering and has an obvious fetish for Asian women. But for some reason, Ji-Won can't seem to stop thinking about his bright blue eyes... and wondering what they would taste like...

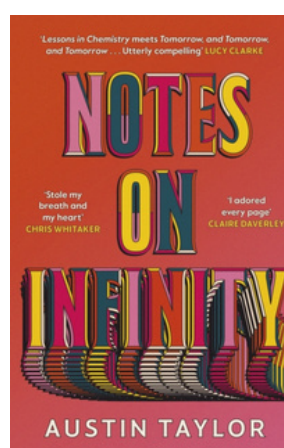

THE GOD OF THE WOODS by LIZ MOORE

FICTION - 31ST JULY

HarperCollins £9.99

August 1975. A girl goes missing from a summer camp in the Adirondack Mountains. She is the daughter of the wealthiest family in town and the second Van Laar child to disappear without a trace. As the pressure to find her rises, the locals begin to murmur: how could a single family accrue so much tragedy?

NOTES ON INFINITY by AUSTIN TAYLOR

FICTION - 10TH JULY

Penguin £16.99

Harvard students Zoe and Jack are on the cusp of an incredible scientific breakthrough: a cure for ageing. As their project and their partnership gather momentum, they launch a bio-tech startup and prepare for the success to roll in. But when a shocking accusation arises, both the company and their relationship are at risk of collapsing.

ORLANDA by JACQUELINE HARPMAN

FICTION - 3RD JULY

Vintage £9.99

Since childhood, Aline has been told to suppress her less feminine sides. At 35, she is a passive, conventional woman. But when she encounters a strange young man, Aline realises that her stifled psyche has taken over his body. A bold and lyrical exploration of gender, society, and the self.

I'LL BE RIGHT HERE by AMY BLOOM

FICTION - 3RD JULY

Granta £16.99

In the aftermath of WWII, Gazala immigrates from Paris to New York and quickly befriends two sisters, Anne and Alma. When Gazala's long-lost brother Samir joins them, the four form an unconventional family. A rich and complex found-family saga that spans decades.
